HOW A TENEMENT BOY BROUGHT RAIN OF GOLD INTO EAST SIDE HOME

Here's the Fireside of a Real Fighter-Mother of Knockout Brown Tells About Model Son Who Dumped $8,000 Into Her Apron in Less Than a Year.

OVE for his mother and Irish stew is the real secret of the success of Knockout Brown as a fighter, all experts to the contrary notwithstanding. This information came straight from headquarters, and it is right. The mother of Knockout Brown, a sunny-natured little German woman, told it to me while the photographer was getting ready to take a picture of the humble little tenement home in lower First

"Tas it true?" I asked Mrs. Brown, "that the grandmother of your fighting boy was Irish?"

"Mein Lieber Gotti" and with arms skimbo she'struck an attitude of goodnatured railiery which also had a tinge of scorn. "Dot iss all bosh by the fighting press business agent. All der Irish vot iss in dot boy iss Irish stew, und even dot dould be called by annuader name in Cherman."

Danny Morgan, the active manager of Rnockout Brown, was in the other room, and didn't get a chance to put his blue penc'l on the remark before it went down as a part of the records. Danny has always insisted that Brown's left hand was Irish and that it was handed down by his grandmother, who was Irish and ief-handed.

fight, fight, fight from the moment the two boys were able to appear on the streets and defend them selves.

The prettiest thing in the life of this young fighter is his never-failing love for his mother. If the bejeweited and befurred fight fans who sit at the ring side and cheer this young fellow through rings of smok from 1 ported digars could get a glance into that little home on Firs avenue and see the hero of the ring on his knees scrubbing the floor for his old mother, who is often afflicted with rheumatism, they would see what it is that makes Brown a real fighter. Columbia Wins Hot Game From Penn State Five

Capt. Kiendl Scores More Than Half of Blue and White's Points.

In a rough, close game, the Columbia asketball five w | over Penn State at the Morningside gymnasium by the score of 24-16. Both teams displayed streaks of mids son form in passing but were week in their shooting. Capt. Klendl, for the Blue and White. played his usual fast game and was responsible for more than half of Columbia's score. Shore and Young played excellently for Penn State, the former scoring ten of the sixteen points made by his team and the latter putting up a strong defense. The game started with a great displaof speed upon the part of the Penn State boys, and they had scored six some pretty team work on the part of Salabury and Kiendl, however, soon put the Columbia team in the lead. The
